Passage 1:

Dictionaries are valuable tools for language learners. They help us understand the meaning of words, their pronunciation, and how to use them correctly. There are two main types of dictionaries: monolingual and bilingual. A monolingual dictionary explains words in the same language. For example, an English monolingual dictionary defines English words using other English words. This type of dictionary is helpful for native speakers who want to learn more about their language or for advanced language learners. A bilingual dictionary translates words from one language to another. For instance, an English-Spanish bilingual dictionary translates English words into Spanish and vice versa. This type of dictionary is essential for language learners who are still developing their vocabulary in a foreign language. 2
